ENVIRONMENTAL & NATURAL RESOURCES LAW CLINIC - Spring 2015, Registration

The Environmental and Natural Resources Law Clinic has since 1989 offered students the opportunity to prepare for practice by assisting clients with issues under federal Clean Water Act, Clean Air Act, Endangered Species Act, National Environment Policy Act, and other federal, state, and local environmental laws.

The Environmental and Natural Resources Law Clinic provides legal representation to individuals and dozens of national and regional public interest environmental groups. Cases include appeals, regulatory proceedings, land use, and citizen suits as private attorneys general in Federal and State courts. Students work with administrative agencies, scientists and engineers, conduct documentary research, and develop and implement legal strategies under the close supervision of the Clinic Director.

The Environmental and Natural Resources Law Clinic also includes a weekly seminar that addresses substantive and procedural problems encountered by students in their clinical work as well as work on the Clinic Case, an exercise to develop and hone practical skills of civil litigation drafting and strategy.

Recommended but not required: One of the following: Environmental Law, Natural Resources Law, Enforcement of Environmental Law, Ocean & Coastal Law, Environmental Seminar, Toxic Torts, and Evidence.

For more information visit www.widenerelc.org and click on “Environmental Law Clinic – For Students” link.

Once enrolled in the Environmental Law Clinic, students may not withdraw from the course without specific written authorization from the Program Director.
The Delaware Civil Clinic (DCC) provides free legal services to survivors of domestic violence, living below the poverty level, seeking civil legal representation, in obtaining protection from abuse orders, custody, visitation, and preparing divorce petitions. Legal representation also may include preparing wills, power of attorney, and health care directives for elderly and terminally ill Delawareans. The DCC operates in conjunction with Delaware Volunteer Legal Services, Inc. (DVLS), the pro bono arm of the Delaware State Bar Association.

Third year DCC students are admitted to the limited practice of law, as Certified Legal Interns, pursuant to Delaware Supreme Court Rule 56 and represent clients in Family Court. DCC students learn practical legal skills in the representation of actual clients.

The DCC is a one semester course for 6 credits. Third year students are expected to work a minimum of twenty (20) hours a week. Student duties include:

- Intake and Case Assessment
- Client & Witness Interviews
- Conduct Factual and Legal Investigations
- Prepare Memorandum of Law
- Prepare Legal Documents (petitions, motions, etc.)
- Trial Preparation (trial strategy, opening statements, direct and cross examinations, evidentiary issues, etc.)
- Negotiation
- Litigation
- Community Outreach

Students are expected to work through school vacations during the semester and may be required to keep court dates during the final exam period.

The DCC may also accept second year students for 2 credits depending on space availability, to do limited work in the clinic for approximately seven (7) hours per week.

Students enrolled in the DCC are able to satisfy some of their Delaware Bar Clerkship requirements through participation in the DCC.

Students must be available every Friday for court rotation, trial observation, and hearings; every Tuesday for team meetings and class; and to work a four-hour scheduled telephone intake duty for the Legal Help Link (8:45 AM to 12:45 PM or 12:45 PM to 4:45 PM, Monday through Thursday). Students participating in the DCC must also attend all Friday training sessions beginning the first week of classes. These sessions are mandatory and will take place during business hours.

Once enrolled in the Delaware Civil Clinic, students may not withdraw from the course without specific written authorization from the Program Director.
History: The Veterans Law Clinic provides free legal representation to veterans residing in Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Prof. Susan Saidel is the current Program Director.

Type & Kind of Clients and Cases: The Veterans Law Clinic represents veterans with disabilities stemming from their time in the military service who have been denied compensation from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs. Student interns will represent disabled veterans through all phases of the case from intake and initial interviews, investigation and gathering of documentary evidence, working with forensic experts, representing clients at administrative hearings, and appellate brief writing.

Students may also work on other legal issues facing veterans, and will be required to attend several outreach events during the semester to provide legal services.

Program Objectives & Skills Training: The primary objectives of the clinic are two-fold. First, students should leave the clinic with a working knowledge of how to practice veterans’ law and administrative law. Second, students should gain a range of practical skills useful in any legal practice, including (a) how to conduct intakes and interview clients, (b) how to file administrative claims, (c) how to locate and guide forensic experts, (d) how to gather documentary evidence, (e) how to present opening statements and direct examinations at administrative hearings, (f) how to write administrative and appellate briefs, and (e) how to manage time and cases using firm-style client-matter management software.

The clinic includes a classroom component once a week for two hours. The classroom component focuses on skills training relating to VA benefits practice and on the substantive law of VA compensation benefits.

Eligible Students and Time Commitments: This program is especially suitable for Extended Division students. Generally, students are enrolled for six credits and are expected to spend 20 hours per week working in the Veterans Law Clinic. Because of the nature of the clinical work, some work can be done at home or another suitable location away from the Law School. Students can enroll for three to five credits, but should be aware that the clinic does require a significant time commitment.

Students enrolled in the Clinic may be able to satisfy some of their Delaware Bar Clerkship requirements through participation in the Veterans Law Clinic.

Prerequisites: Students will be selected by the Clinic’s Director after submission of application and interview. The clinic is open to any student who has completed at least 3 semesters and Professional Responsibility

Directed Research for Second Semester: Interns who wish to assist the program for an additional semester may register for a Directed Research project related to VA benefits practice.

Once enrolled in the Veterans Law Clinic, students may not withdraw from the course without specific written authorization from the Program Director.
