Class Visit Course Descriptions

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW: This class examines the First Amendment of the United States Constitution, and specifically the Amendment's protections of freedom of speech and freedom of religion. Free speech topics include government regulation of speech based upon a speaker's message and government regulation of speech for other reasons such as aesthetics, tranquility, and order. Freedom of religion topics include government actions that interfere with a person's religious practice and government actions that favor or benefit religion.

CONTRACTS II: This course is the continuation of the study of the law governing contracts and contractual relationships that began with Contracts I. The course more extensively considers contract formation, interpretation, defenses, performance, non-performance and remedies, especially under the provisions of Article 2 and Article 2A of the Uniform Commercial Code applicable to transactions in goods. This course also introduces students to assignment, delegation and third-party beneficiary rights.

CRIMINAL LAW: This course studies the general principles that underlie statutory criminal liability, including a consideration of their judicial application in the context of selected offenses and defenses.

TORTS II: This course is a continuation of the study of covers general theories of tort liability. This course considers defamation and privacy; fraud and other business torts; an introduction to products liability; and damages. Other topics possibly to be included are: nuisance; statutory torts, such as wrongful death, survival and joint and several liability; and abnormally dangerous activities.
